BANQUET OF THE BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION LARGELY ATTENDED

Affair Was Signally Successful And Many Prominent Men Were Present.

JUDGE REED GAVE ADDRESS

The "Glad Hand" banquet of the Business Men's Association Thursday evening at Hotel Imperial has never been surpassed, probably, in Reynoldsville in brilliancy of appointments, in number of prominent men present from all over the county, and in the main object of creating a spirit of friendship among the citizens interested in the varied commercial and industrial enterprises of Reynoldsville. Covers were laid for one hundred persons and the large banquet room of the Imperial presented an animated sight when the guests, who had gathered in the parlor on the second floor, marched into the room at nine o'clock to the strains of "The Glad Hand" march, composed by Prof. Arthur H. Haskins, of Reynoldsville, for the occasion. The tables were richly decorated with carnations and loaded with the finest delicacies obtainable by the management.

Throughout the serving of the menu, which required one hour and fifteen minutes, the orchestra rendered continuous music, varying from the soft strains to the stirring patriotic medleys that moved the banqueters to long applause. The orchestra closed with a "Salute to Reynoldsville" especially appropriate to the occasion. The best of feeling reigned among the assembled guests and the flow of conversation never ceased, nor the laughter that denoted the happiness of those present.

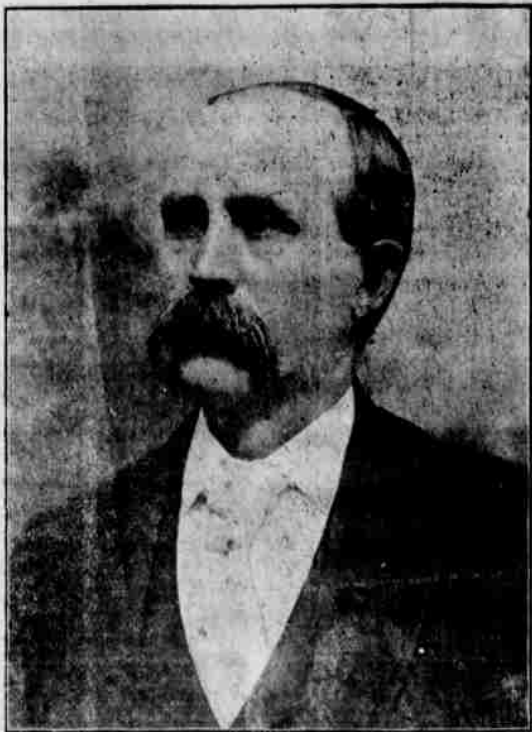

When the feast was over and the cigars had been passed Dr. Thomas F. Nolan in a brief and well worded address introduced the toastmaster of the evening, J. Owen Edelblute, who rose to the occasion with a humorous and informal speech that harmonized with the spirit of the event. Throughout the balance of the evening Mr. Edelblute proved himself a master in the duties of his office and kept the program moving smoothly, introducing each speaker with some graceful and pointed remark.

It is no disparagement to any speaker of the evening to say that the opening toast, "True Greatness," by Clement W. Flynn, Esq., was the most eloquent effort of the event. His fluent command of English and the genuine nobility of thought displayed in the address moved the banqueters to sincere applause and recalled to their minds the toastmaster's introductory words: That the speaker was himself "greatness personified."

A quartette consisting of Arthur H. Haskins, Frank P. Alexander, Dr. H. B. King and Prof. I. M. Smith, followed with a selection that pleased so
